The matter was incorrectly reported in a morning cotemporary, and we hasten to set the facts before the public, as related by Uscle Peter himself. The affair occurred between 12 and 1 o'clock on Monday night, while Uncle Peter was making his way home from an up-town party, for which he had supplied the refreshments. As he was coming down Main atreet a big, burly fellow stepped from a door way and demanded his money or his life. Without a moment's healiation Uncle Peter let himself loose. His first blow knocked the fellow down, and he fullowed it up with a series of vigorous kicks, which caused the rascal to beg for mercy. Uncle Peter then generously bade him go and sin no more. That's all there was of it, according to Uncle Peter.

At the close of the literary exercises the Waverlies and a few invited guests adjourned to Martin's, where they partock of a fine collation, gotten up in that inimitable restaurateur's best style. Speeches, songs and tosats were indulged in during the evening, to a degree that bordered on recklessness; but as the boys desired to enjoy themselves in an innocent way, they did so without much ceremony. Archie Paxton was in excellent voice, and sang several solos with great celat. Hai, Black and Mr. Paxten also contributed several duets to the enjoyment of the occasion. Mr. Jake Kemple was called upon for a performance in his peculiar specialty, but declined on account of hoarseness.

President McNell', read an foriginal poem entitled "Waverly" which was greeled with riproarous applause, after which tosats were announced and responded to as follows:
